Safety Tips / Announcements

UTILITY SCAM

Impersonators call , email, or text demanding payment for supposedly delinquent bills and threatening to terminate service. These scammers pick up their pace during the warm summer and the cold winter months.

Warning Signs

from our friends at AARP

1. You receive an unscheduled or unsolicited call, text, email or visit from someone claiming to represent your power or water company.
2. Threats to cut off service unless an overdue bill or maintenance cost is paid immediately.
3. A demand for payment by wire transfer, cryptocurrency, gift card or cash-reload card – scammers' favored methods.
4. Payments on credit card or bank statements for utility accounts you did not open.

Utilities

What To Do?

- Call the utility directly using their official number.
- Know that utilities will never ask for personal information, ask you to pay by cash app or credit card.
- Ask questions of anyone contacting you on supposed utility business. Ask for their employee id number, the date and amount of your most recent payment.
